

SOLDIER PORTRAITS

Photography really came into its own during the Civil War. Today portraits of Civil War soldiers are in abundance, though often unidentified. Gifted photographers like Mathew Brady preserved for future generations compelling images.

Mattoon had at least 3 photography studios in business during the war years, and while the photographers of these Mattoon soldiers are unidentified it is likely that a few may have been made here in Mattoon.

I. R. MARTIN,
AMBROTYPE
 AND PHOTOGRAPHER,
Over Richmond & Dodd's Store, Corner of
Broadway and First street,
MATTOON, ILL.
 Instructions given in the Ambrotype and Photographic arts on reasonable terms.

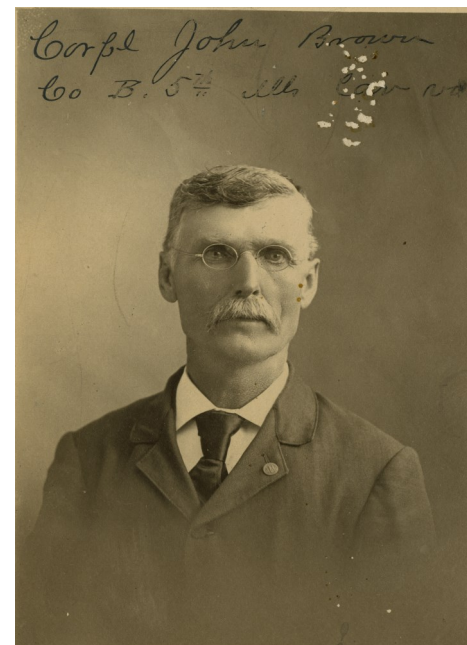

PHOTOGRAPH ARTISTS.
 WALTER KILNER--In Car south-east corner
 Broadway and 1st streets.
 W M WEST.--Corner Broadway and First,
 south side.

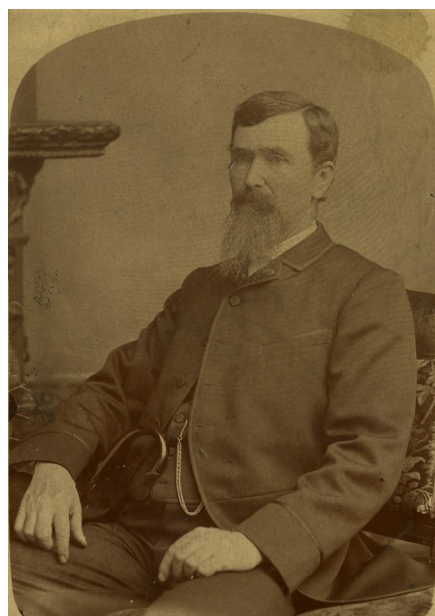

Privates Stewart and William Auld. Company B, 7th Infantry.

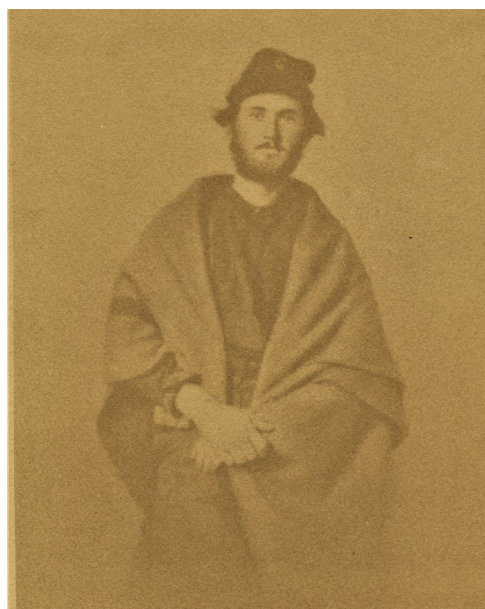

Private Andrew J Greathouse. Company C, 62nd Infantry.

Corporal John Brown. Company B, 5th Cavalry.

Private Elijah Jones. Company A, 54th Infantry.

Private Henry Compton. Company C, 1st Cavalry.

Private Cyrus D Green. Company B, 7th Infantry.